Johnson Health Tech, a leader in the fitness, wellness and health industry, constructed their corporate headquarters building in the Village of Cottage Grove in 2006. Upon completion, the project was awarded 'Top Project of the Year' by both Wisconsin Builder and The Daily Reporter. Vierbicher was part of the original design team providing civil engineering and landscape architecture services for the project. With the company's continued growth and success since that time, more staff have been added, which subsequently led to the need for modify the site to create additional parking stalls for those staff members.

Johnson Health Tech is again partnering with Vierbicher to strategically incorporate an additional 40 parking stalls into the existing site. Along with the client, Vierbicher has identified several locations to add these parking stalls, while not upsetting the environmental amenities for stormwater that were put in place with the original project. Modifications to the existing site are anticipated to be constructed during the 2020 construction season. This will provide the employees of Johnson Health Tech the ability to park within the expanded parking lot, rather than on adjacent streets.
