Franklin Public Schools was a growing suburban Milwaukee district that had a dated, undersized middle school building. The resulting building is a flexible and forward-looking learning environment that allows 1,200 sixth through eighth grade students access to myriad specialty spaces supported by a large middle school.

Funding for the project was provided through a referendum totaling $43.3 million. The new middle school has space for sixth grade, something the previous building did not have, as well as bigger classrooms and more space for the students.

Vierbicher was happy to be part of the team that brought this new school to reality through the following services:

- wetland delineation
- topographic map
- tree survey
- right-of-way dedication assistance
- plat of survey
- easement documents
- concept plan development
- ALTA survey
- full site design
- landscape architecture
- preparation of permit applications
- construction administration
